THE HISTORY OF HONDURAN CIGARS & DON RUPERTO

Honduras has long stood among the most celebrated tobacco-producing nations in the world. Its mountainous terrain, mineral-rich volcanic soils, and ideal climate create growing conditions that rival even the most storied tobacco regions on earth — from the lush valleys of El Paraíso to the highlands of Copán and the fertile plains of Olancho.

The modern era of Honduran cigars took shape in the 1960s, when political upheaval disrupted Cuba's legendary industry and master rollers sought new homes for their craft. Honduras, with its compatible growing conditions, became one of the most important destinations of that diaspora. Cuban-seed varieties flourished in Honduran soil, and by the 1990s, Honduran cigars had firmly established themselves as a staple in the humidors of serious aficionados worldwide.

It is within this tradition that Don Ruperto Cigars was born. The brand carries forward the values of its founder, now stewarded by his grandson Carlos, who ensures every leaf is hand-selected and every cigar rolled with the same exacting care that made the original blends legendary. Drawing from multiple Honduran regions alongside select Nicaraguan tobaccos and the Criollo 98 varietal, each cigar is finished in Honduran cedar wood boxes — preserving flavor, honoring heritage, and continuing a centuries-old conversation between land, artisan, and smoke.

A CIGAR FOR TRUE SMOKING ENTHUSIASTS

FOUR LINES, ONE STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE

CONNECTICUT

This silky, golden wrapper is grown in Ecuador under natural cloud cover, which mimics the shade-grown method used in Connecticut. Known for its mild profile, it delivers a creamy, smooth smoking experience with subtle hints of nuts and sweetness. Ideal for those who enjoy a refined, mellow cigar.

HABANO

Crafted from Cuban-seed tobacco grown in the fertile soils of Honduras, this Habano wrapper offers a medium to full-bodied flavor. It boasts rich notes of spice, earthiness, and a touch of pepper, making it a favorite for those seeking a bold and complex cigar.

MADURO

From the celebrated San Andrés region of Mexico, this dark and oily Maduro wrapper provides a luxurious smoking experience. Known for its sweet and earthy profile, it features notes of cocoa, coffee, and a hint of spice. This wrapper is perfect for smokers looking for a rich and indulgent flavor.

DOUBLE WRAPPED

Don Ruperto Cigars offer a unique smoking experience with a double wrapper blend featuring a smooth Connecticut leaf from Ecuador and a rich Maduro leaf from Mexico's San Andrés region. Perfectly crafted for a balanced, flavorful draw.

THE CONNECTICUT LINE

CREAMY | SMOOTH | SUBTLE NUTTINESS

The Connecticut Line. Grown beneath Ecuador’s natural cloud cover to mimic the classic shade-grown method, this silky golden wrapper delivers a refined, mellow smoke with hints of cream, roasted nuts, and gentle sweetness.
